

HUMAN-MADE OCEAN: AFTER OIL EXTRACTION

The project envisions repurposing decommissioned offshore oil and gas platforms to support marine environments and human activities sustainably, balancing human intervention with nature's preservation. Globally, it transforms platforms into decentralized data storage hubs, while locally, it creates community-centered spaces with seaweed farming in Sungai Apit, Indonesia, to protect mangrove forests and boost local economies.

